DIALOG worked with Urban Green to develop a vision where residents are more than just neighbours; they are a diverse community that share the common values of building a vibrant community, being environmentally and socially sustainable, and doing so in an urban environment.

The result is an energy-efficient, 26-unit midrise housing project in Edmonton's Old Strathcona neighbourhood. The building is composed of private residential units of varying sizes and bedroom counts, catering to a range of demographic groups including young families, single occupants, and seniors. The project encourages cross-pollination between its diverse group of residents through shared amenity spaces. Residents can use these spaces to share their experiences, knowledge and build a stronger sense of community.
