The Humpy Hollow Park Redevelopment demonstrates Calgary’s dedication to enhancing public spaces that serve and enrich the community. Situated in the Beltline area, this urban park transformation has revitalized an underutilized green space into a vibrant hub, seamlessly integrating the historic McHugh House, built in 1896, with contemporary park amenities. The redevelopment celebrates the park’s heritage while creating a dynamic, multi-purpose space that meets the needs of today’s urban community. Shaped by extensive public engagement, the park’s design centers around the “Play & Perform” concept, which supports diverse programming and amenities. Flexible performance areas, a playful landscape, and casual gathering spots ensure the park remains active and welcoming year-round.
